AFTER THE CATTLE TICK

Plans looking towards the eradication of the cattle tick in Houston county will be formulated at a meeting to be held at the court house in Dothan Saturday. The meeting has been called by a number of progressive farmers who desire to meet in this city for a time and open discussion on the subject. The promoters are anxious that the farmers attending this meeting, is it a purely formal and it is believed will result in much good being accomplished.

SOFT DRINKS TAX VEXING PROBLEM

Montgomery, Ala., April 27.—Just what is the best method of taxing soft drinks in Alabama and just how far the State can go in this matter without violating the State Constitution, is the problem that is now worrying the members of the Legislative Finance and Taxation Committee, in session at the Capitol.

Practically all of the members agree that a tax should be imposed on these drinks, especially on a certain soft drink manufactured in Atlanta, which is sold all over Alabama. The committee members feel that this drink should be taxed, but they are at loss as to what course to pursue in the matter.

One suggestion offered is that each dealer who sells such drinks be required to pay a license tax. Another suggestion is that a tax be collected on each gallon of syrup sold in this state. Another suggestion is that each company be assessed a certain tax in proportion to the amount of business done in Alabama.

If an attempt is made to tax these drinks, a lot of trouble is to follow. When the Legislature was in session in February a bill was prepared taxing all caffeine drinks. Immediately a strong lobby against the bill appeared and it was not passed.

"UNCLE JOE" CANNON DANCES WALTZ TO PAY BET OF 5 YEARS AGO

San Francisco, April 26.—Joseph Cannon of Illinois, tonight fulfilled a promise made five years ago by dancing a waltz in the New York State building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition. The former Speaker is a member of a congressional party en route to the Hawaiian Islands. The promise was given when San Francisco and New Orleans were fighting before Congress for the Exposition. Mr. Cannon, then Speaker, declared that if San Francisco were chosen he would kiss the grounds and participate in a Virginia reel.

Tonight "Uncle Joe" was reminded of his promise. Owing to a slightly bruised knee, a waltz was substituted for the strenuous Virginia reel.

The 130 United States senators and representatives accompanying the party will sail tomorrow for Honolulu.

No one thing has caused the price of cotton to advance so much, probably, as the fact that fertilizer sales have gone off so.

You cannot raise much cotton in this part of the cotton belt, with out commercial fertilizer, and about half as much has been sold this season as on former occasions. It is probably unfortunate that the price has crept to what it is at this stage of the game, for it may be the cause of people planting more than they otherwise would.

Roosevelt is a goner. The headlines say that detectives are to take the stand in his behalf. If the Colonel has been behaving himself in such a way that he and his friends think it necessary to bring in a detective, we very much fear that he's been wandering from the beaten path and stepped from the straight and narrow. Now if he were to come in for an alien, or an expert, we could not raise a finger in his behalf. It would show conclusively that he was in a close place, and knows how Thaw feels.

Brooks Lawrence on Front Page Position

The biggest news item The Advertiser has carried this year, "scum" the time it tried to get the Governor to help put a legal option head in a prohibition body, was an item it carried in Sunday's paper to the effect that Brooks Lawrence was going to leave Alabama and carry the Message to Garcia in some other state.

Brooks Lawrence hasn't been so honored by that paper before. He should feel complimented should he finally decide to resign as superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of Alabama, we believe that paper would run a real photograph of this man it terms the Chief Trouble Maker. And the write up about his going would be set indented, like Fanny Woodruff used to have the boys set up his baseball stories, in all probabilities, with preferred position, "raked around."

And when he had gone away, and bidden good-bye to Alabama, The Advertiser might say something real nice about him, as if he'd died. It might admit that he was a gentleman, even though from Ohio. It might admit that this man, Lawrence, is a clever man, and a man of such energy, and really an earnest proponent of the cause of prohibition. But that would be too

Liberty is a grand thing, and it is fine to live in a free country. That is the reason you hear the enthusiastic cheering of the people who live in states where it is folly to desire a drink of anything stronger than water and where it is a crime to read a leaf or whisky advertisement.

If the reformers really want to help the country why don't they see to it that laws are enacted in each state compelling men to wash his feet at least once per week.

Women and Silence.

Commercial Appeal.

Out in Colorado there lives a woman who has discovered the value of silence.

Mrs. Helen Ring Robinson enjoys the distinction of having served as a member of the Colorado State Senate. She is therefore in a position to express an opinion on the question of silence.

Since the creation of the world, since that eventful conversation of Eve with his satanic majesty, woman has been privileged to talk. It has, in fact, been the popular belief that woman cannot be silenced or denied the last word. Humorists have made this a theme of many sarcastic jokes. The loquacious sex has been merely jested in song and story.

Now Mrs. Robinson comes forward with the statement that women should learn to hold their tongues. "It took me nearly 2 years to learn to keep still." In my first session in the State Senate I liked to make speeches, but I did not talk as much in this last session. Experience taught me when and how to hold my tongue.

It is often a difficult matter to preserve silence. Most of us are talking all the time. A thing which is often difficult to keep in exact proportion as it is dangerous not to keep it best described in silence. It is so frail a thing that we cannot even speak of it without breaking it, and yet as easily and as completely to be restored as it was destroyed. Few people understand the advantages of silence or appreciate the value of this mysterious quality.

Most men and women when they talk think that they are conferring pleasure on others because they feel it themselves, but none suspect that the same object may sometimes be more effectively obtained by their silence.

A good listener is much more rare than a good talker, because the conversation of general society seldom fixes the attention, and thus in the hopelessness of curing the evil we aggravate it.

In public life Mrs. Robinson discovered that it was talk that deters reform and brings ridicule on even religion itself. In private life disintegrates families and creates war on street corners. The madness of speech is more terrifying than the curse of liquor.

All vices are offensive, but the vice of unnecessary talk, of pitiless gossip, of worthless personal opinion, of uncharitable criticism is the final and most fiendish vice of all, and it is from this vice that Helen Ring Robinson is striving to protect and emancipate her sex.

Deeds of Daring in the Movies

In the May American Magazine, Cleveland Moffett, writing an article entitled, "Deeds of Daring in the Movies," tells many wonderful stories of the thrilling adventures of moving picture managers and actors. One of the stories he tells is that of Bobby Leach, who went over Niagara Falls in a specially constructed barrel for the benefit of a moving picture man named Walter Arthur, who made the film. Mr. Moffett quotes Mr. Arthur's description of this adventure as follows:

"We had a lively time taking those motion pictures. In the first place we had to dodge the police, who wanted to arrest Leach on the charge of attempted suicide. Then the big crowd bothered us there were thousands watching along the banks—and we had to be everlastingly quick to catch the barrel as it came over the falls. We don't know exactly which way to aim our camera."

"At the start they towed the barrel out from a little island on the Canadian side about a mile above the cataract. Bobby was inside, with pillows at one end of the barrel to protect his head, and a harness of three-inch webbing strapped around him so that his body would be held suspended away from the sides of the barrel."

"I was stationed on the bank at the bottom of the falls with my motion picture machine ready and I don't mind saying that I never expected to see Bobby Leach again. Suddenly I saw the black shape of the barrel with its sharp wooden nose poised on the brink. It hung there a few seconds before it plunged down a hundred and sixty-eight feet to the river below."

"After the first crash at the bottom of the falls Bobby says the barrel stayed on end for over a minute, and he thought it as broke it against the inside handle wedged in the rocks at the bottom of the river, and would stay there. This is when he fainted."

"We were waiting at a point in the power house cove where the control barrels had floated. We thought he would come out here, but he did not come. A minute passed, two minutes, and we searched the smooth black surface where the 'Maid of the Mist' was lying ready to help. Nothing! Three minutes. It seemed like hours, and then, a little distance off from the shore, we made out the black shape of the barrel sweeping on toward the rapids. Everybody yelled, and a big strap-ping fellow from the firehouse leaped into the river and struck out bravely. We saw him swim up to the barrel, throw one arm over it and turn struggling toward the shore. Then two other young fellows rushed in and, among them, they brought the barrel to the bank."

"All this time I was grinding out motion pictures, and I recorded on the film how they opened the manhole and worked over Bobby with stimulants, and finally unstrapped him and got him out on a stretcher. Then we packed up our apparatus and made a hasty departure for the authorities were after us. Poor Bobby spent weeks in the hospital with both knee caps smashed and a broken jaw. He said he broke it against the inside handle of the manhole."

Retired At The Right Time

That all men are withdrawn from the field of human action at precisely the proper time in order that the divine purposes for which they are created may be fulfilled, may be the correct understanding of divinely appointed human mission.

That Goliath, slain in battle by the Shepherd of Canaan, removed from the political and military field its greatest obstruction, there is no doubt within the minds of the students of the history of those times.

That Hannibal, Charlemagne, Napoleon and the other men of history, were taken from the arena of human activity just at the time that their mission was fulfilled, there can be no doubt.

Shall we say that Lincoln, Gandhi, George Washington, McKinley and other men of power and influence, whose history-making usefulness, secured uncompleted, and whose manner of removal shocked the world, maddened the nations, interrupted the progress of events were taken untimely?

If viewed in the broader sense, divinely ordered events, outwardly directed power, is it not true, that, although regarded as sacrifice, it really is evidence of finished service, when the man of the hour is withdrawn from the world, either by martyrdom or the quiet processes of senility, has passed out of human need exactly when he should, thus carrying the perfect ends for which he is chosen and for which he has been perpetuated in service.

Who is the man to be removed from the nations at war in Europe, whose departure from the field will end the terrible struggle and whose going will be the signal for the completion of the mission?

Intent, toward which the whole creation moves" and despite our little quibblings God orders all things well.

SAYS A MAN IN LOVE IS DIZZY

In the May American Magazine, James Montgomery Flagg, the famous wit and artist, does an amusing piece in verse and pictures entitled, "Wires." Following is an extract descriptive of a man in love: "There is an impression in some circles that a man in love is a woman to marry him is paying her the highest compliment in the power. To marry her is generally dizz in the head."

the vaguest idea of being complimentary—he just wants the lady to leave her home and live with him in a manner to which she is entirely unaccustomed."

IF YOU ARE AN IDLER, DON'T WORRY THE BUSY

By Ada Patterson, In Commercial-Appeal.

If you are idle, pray spare the busy.

A magazine recently published a symposium of distinguished women on the theme, "Why women break down." One expressed the conviction: "It is the inconsiderateness of their friends that break women down." She is right in eight cases out of ten of nervous breakdown among women.

The woman who has the good sense to organize well her life, would not break down despite the dandicap of a delicately poised nervous organism were she allowed to follow her original programme. But she is not so permitted. There is a conspiracy among the idlers who know her to prevent the smooth flowing of the current of her days.

She begins the day well, for she has had her full quota of sleep. She has gone to the open window or the flat roof of her dwelling and has swept her lungs free of stale air and filled them with fresh, by deep breathing. She has had her cold shower plunge to strengthen her nerves. She has, discarding all the fads for no breakfast or a light breakfast, taken a substantial first meal, to fortify herself for the day's drought upon her vitality. She has planned her day's duties. As becomes one who has planned well her day and who has found her particular work in the world she opens her desk with a smile.

What happens? The first letter on top of the pile that awaits her is an impertinence. It asks for information which the writer could have secured for herself by a little effort. Lazily she has laid the burden of the investigation upon shoulders already carrying their capacity of weight. She has asked this busy woman to do something which she, an idler, has plenty of time but no inclination to do. Sometimes the busy woman administers the smothering impertinence by ignoring the letter. Rudeness, begins rudeness. More often, because woman is of a nature easily imposed upon, she accepts this added weight in the sum of the day's work.

In the heap of letters she finds other time wasters. Long letters that could have told their story in a short one, for example. Letters that wandered miles from the subject, and letters that should never have been written, selfish letters venting the writer's need of expression and making the innocent busy woman read. Often she only glances through long personal tales and distributes them against the world.

No wonder that the woman sighs and looks at the clock. Small wonder that she places some of these epistolary impertinences in a letter rack and leaves them there indefinitely as they deserve.

Here—r—r—r! The telephone. Chief sinner among time wasters and nerve destroyers when per-spare the busy ones, he they women or men.

BAD STOMACH TROUBLE
Yields to Delicious Vinol

Shreveport, La.—"I had a bad stomach trouble for years and became so weak I could hardly walk or do any work. My appetite was poor, my food would not digest, I bloated and was very weak and nervous. I tried many remedies without help. I now feel strong and healthy and my stomach trouble is completely cured and I am well."—E. L. MARSHALL.

Vinol is guaranteed to tone up the stomach, over-taxed and weakened nerves of the stomach and create strength.

N. H. McCallum, druggist, Dothan, Ala., and at leading drug stores everywhere.

Then come callers. Some of them from curiosity. Others to kill time. Beauty destroyers, these callers, for after she has disposed of them her lips tighten in a straight line. There is a deep vertical furrow between her brows. And the reservoir of her previous vitality has been half emptied.

Come by messenger, by telegram, by more mail and by impertinent telegrams, invitations to dine or to go to the theatre. They are from the idle people who don't care a great deal for the busy woman but who want her to amuse them. The world-old demand of the idle folk from childhood to senility, upon the busy ones, to furnish them amusement. The busy folk are close to the beating heart of the world. Things happen in their neighborhood. The idle folk want to hear the echo of these happenings from one who was near. Hence the invitations. The busy woman, if she has clear vision, knows this and she declines to be the entertainer in return for food. She refuses to give much for little or nothing. She generally declines the invitations, but she must answer them. Another purloining of her time.

Another leak in the reservoir of her vitality. Then the friend who calls and stays too long, although the clock faces her, reminding her that she is stealing a precious fraction of the time the busy woman, who is now the painfully tired woman, has consecrated to rest. And the friend who is so insistent upon "a life after the play" that to refuse to accompany her or him would be an affront. Social highwaymen, stealing hours instead of dollars.

IF SKIN BREAKS OUT AND ITCHES APPLY SULPHUR

Use it like a cold cream and dry Eczema eruptions right up.

The moment you apply hold-sulphur to an itching or broken out skin, the itching stops and healing begins, says a renowned dermatologist.

This remarkable sulphur made into a thick cream effects such prompt relief, even in aggravated Eczema, that it is a never-ending source of amazement to physicians.

For many years hold-sulphur has occupied a secure position in the treatment of cutaneous eruptions by reason of its cooling, parasite-destroying properties and nothing has ever been found to take its place in relieving irritable and inflammatory affections of the skin. While not always establishing a permanent cure, yet in every instance, it immediately subdues the itching irritation and heals the Eczema right up and it is often years later before any eruption again manifests itself.

Any good druggist will supply an ounce of hold-sulphur, which should be applied to the affected parts like the ordinary cold cream. It isn't unpleasant and the prompt relief afforded is very welcome, particularly when the Eczema is accompanied with torturous itching.

VAIDEN TEN

ALAGAS FIND BATTING EYES

By finding their batting eyes, the Alagas took the opening game from Americans yesterday, getting ten hits off Vaiden, while Oscar Baker, the home twirler, gave up only three hits. The score was 8 to 3. In the preliminaries Baker was a little wild and walked several men, but he soon found his old-time stride and put a stop to this foolishness. The Columbia boy struck out seven men, against six by Vaiden of the visitors.

It would be difficult to give all the features, but among them was the pitching of Baker, the hard work of Manager Jack Reidy, and the bare handed catch of a difficult one by Fred Chambers at first. It is also well to mention the two-base hit of Catcher Ollie Attridge.

The game was witnessed by some 2,250 fans, and grand stand and bleachers were packed.

KAMER RUNNING TO FLANDERS FRONT TO DEBUT ONSLAUGHT

Amsterdam, April 26.—Emperor William is rushing to the Flanders front on his special train to direct the operations against the Allies at Ypres and along the Yser front, according to dispatches received here today from Berlin.

German official reports state that the Kaiser was at Krakow, Poland, when he was attacked by a new Flanders battle. He was immediately taken to a hospital where he is now recovering from his wounds.

Photo © IWS

Just now, with spring thaws turning roads and fields into quagmires, the transportation department of all the armies are tied up. But a few weeks ago when the above photograph was taken, before the frost was entirely out of the ground, the German bicycle division operating in Poland was doing wonderful work. The division was located in a section where good roads and level country abounded, where they could work at their best. The picture shows a squad dismounted and lined up behind trees prepared to engage with a Russian reconnoitering party which they have espied. The Cossacks, mounted, offer splendid targets to the wheelmen from their point of vantage.

WILLIAMSON OF PITTSBURG. —ORIGINAL HARD LUCK ATHLETE.

C. McMillan 1000

Pittsburg, April 26.—The photograph shows G. W. Williamson, of University of Pittsburg, who has been termed "the original Hard luck athlete." He is to be captain of this year's football team, because of his showing last autumn. He raced through Cornell's team almost as well last fall, scoring one touchdown, but in the following game with Ann Arbor he sustained a fractured bone in the leg. This injury laid him up until the final Thanksgiving day game with Penn State, when his clever generalship was a large factor in winning the game for Pittsburg.

He is a good pitcher, but just as the spring practice started, he was operated on for appendicitis. His home is in Indianapolis, and he prepared for college at New Mexico Military Academy, Roswell, N. M., where his family formerly lived.

Washington—Many of the press comments on the decision of the United States District Court, rendered March 20 at Topeka, Kansas, is limited in its operation. The court's decision, according to the United States Department of Agriculture, are erroneous, and are apt to mislead the public concerning the real situation in this matter.

The Kansas decision, like a former decision to the same effect in the eastern district of Arkansas, is limited in its operation solely to the district in which it was rendered. Neither decision settles or nullifies the law, and the exact contrary has been held by the United States District Court for South Dakota. The Arkansas case has been appealed to, and is now pending in the United States Supreme Court. The act of Congress protecting migratory birds stands effective until the supreme court finally decides the question of its constitutionality. In the meantime it is incumbent on every law-abiding citizen to observe its provisions and the regulations.

It is the duty of the Department of Agriculture to enforce this law and the officials in charge will endeavor to do so as long as it is in force. Reports of violations will be carefully investigated, and when sufficient evidence is secured they will be reported for prosecution. In this connection it should not be forgotten that an offender against this, as in the case of other United States laws, is subject to prosecution at any time within three years from the date the offense is committed.

BETTER MOTION PIC-

TURES FOR CHILDREN

The Woman's Home Companion is carrying on a great campaign for better motion pictures. In the May issue it recommends 134 films. Along with these recommendations appears a special article entitled, "Better Films for Children," in which a report is made of an interesting experiment conducted in Louisville, Ky., by Mrs. Frederic Levy. Mrs.

Frederic Levy discovered that her children had attended an undesirable motion picture show. This aroused her interest in getting better motion pictures for Louisville children, and she arranged with moving picture managers for a special performance for children, given at a Louisville theatre one a week—every Saturday morning. The usual ushers are dispensed with and young women attend to the comfort of the children who come from all kinds of homes and vary in age from four to sixteen. Following is an extract from Mrs. Levy's own account of how the children have received this kind of an arrangement:

"Do they appreciate it? You just ought to hear them! They applaud the hero and hiss the villain in true melodramatic style. At a critical moment they jump up and shout advice to the despairing heroine. They weep, they laugh, they yell, according to which chord of their emotions is twanged. They are not seeing pictures. They are living life, a life as full of sweet adventures as a plum pudding.

"We have not worked out all the problems, by any means. For instance, the theatre is certainly located in the business district. This means that many children must pay car fare, which is a considerable item in some families.

"Our plan holds possibilities for any city to work out systematic method for children's programs. Our chief expense is due to our long distance from the exchanges which serve us, the nearest being Cincinnati and Indianapolis. If the interested woman in those cities where exchanges are located could work up special programs, their judgment could be taken by women in other intelligent people would devote places. A network of co-operative service could be built up over a considerable territory surrounding an exchange if a number of some of their time to this urgent need."

Beautiful When Closed

THROUGH the advice

of a dear friend, I was told how much I could save by mending clothes for the family instead of buying them. I had two boys and three girls and although my husband was a working man, I thought nothing of going to the clothing or dry goods store for almost everything. We could save no money, yet, I tried very hard to do so.

One day my friend came to visit us and while helping me with the mending she said, "Mrs. Williams, I see you buy most of the children's clothes ready made."

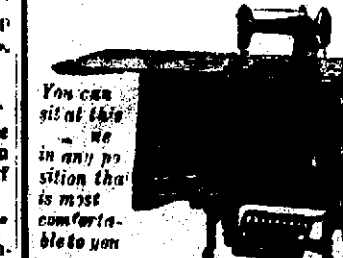

"Yes," I replied, "my old machine runs so hard that my back aches every time I use it; the thread breaks and by the time I get the tension adjusted, the morning and my temper are both gone."

"But," she said, "have you ever tried The FREE machine? I used to go to bed after a day's sewing myself and now I rest while I sew. You will have no trouble with breaking threads on account of a new invention called the Toggle-Link movement, your back will not ache because of the new Rotosec movement, which makes the machine run as light as a feather with a perfect stitch."

"Where can I get this machine?" I asked, "and how much will it cost?" "You can buy it at the leading store in any city or trade your old machine for 'The FREE' and pay the difference of $1 a week for a few weeks."

"Suppose we go down this afternoon and find out what the difference will be."

We did go. I was allowed a liberal amount for my old machine and I found "The FREE" so perfect that I ordered one at once. My husband says it is the best investment I ever made. "The FREE" is so light running—ten-year old Mary can make her own clothes. It is so noiseless, it does not wake the baby; it is so durable—Johnnie cannot put it out of repair and of such fine material it will last for two generations.

THE UNDER-SEA TERRORS

New "Automobile Torpedo" Stays Itself Straight to the Mark at a Mile-a-Minute Speed.

(New York World.) Just what is a torpedo? How does it work? How is it fired? How far will it go? Where is it made?

We are hearing a lot about submarines these days and their deadly work, but it isn't the submarine that does it, after all. It's the torpedo fired by the submarine that says "Good night!" for the heavy battleship or the armored cruiser. Without this necessary adjunct a submarine would perform no useful function.

There is much talk these days about the unpreparedness of the United States. Some of it is true, perhaps. Uncle Sam may not have so very many war boats where he can lay his hands on them. But this much is so—those which he has are strictly up to date and quite capable of doing as deadly work as U-boats have been doing for the Kaiser, and B-11 for the king.

The United States has an extremely formidable torpedo, the "automobile" type. Compressed into its slender shape is great speed, long range, deadly accuracy and high explosive power. Unseen, unheard, it slips quietly to its awful work—the most marvelous fighting machine that man knows. It is a real demon of the under seas—almost human in its possibilities!

The "automobile" torpedo proper consists of a cylindrical shell of thin steel, with lines as finely tapered as a cup defender, 22 feet long and 21 inches in its widest diameter. It weighs two thousand pounds and costs $6,000.

But with these matter-of-fact measurements little is said. The thing is almost alive. It thrums with pent-up power. It reaches the limit of mechanism in that it steers itself. It dives like a porpoise; at a speed of nearly a mile a minute it can go to its aim true as the needle to the pole hitting the spot for which it started, even at a range of four miles. One hit and a $6,000 torpedo sends a $16,000,000 super-dreadnaught to the ocean's floor, a crumpled mass of steel.

There are three main parts to the "automobile" torpedo—the water-head, the air body and the after-body. The water-head contains nearly 300 pounds of explosive. The airflask gives the necessary buoyancy and power. The after-body holds the motor, steering gear, rudders and propellers.

The most ingenious thing about the war-head is the small propeller in front, which prevents the premature explosion of the torpedo when it is fired from its tube. As it leaves the deck of a warship or the bowels of a submarine, and enters the water the firing pin would instantly discharge the explosive. But the firing pin is locked. It is only released when the front propeller begins to revolve by contact with the water. This turns a device which uncovers the pin and puts it in position to detonate. The primer within the torpedo hits.

The air-flask takes up half the length of the torpedo. It is treated to a pressure of 3,000 pounds a square inch. The highly compressed air which it holds and feeds to the machinery is to the turbines of the torpedo what the boilers are to the reciprocating engines of a battleship.

The after body holds all the working parts of the torpedo. Here is the cunning turbine engine operated by compressed air, which spins the two propeller blades at the rate of nearly one thousand revolutions a minute. This develops some 130 horsepower and hurls the torpedo through the water at an initial speed of almost 40 knots an hour and keeps it going for close to 10,000 yards.

And in the tail is the most wonderful of all the working parts of this modern engine of death—the gyroscope. It is the soul and heart of the thing. Adjusted as delicately as a chronometer, it automatically controls, steers and keeps the torpedo true to its line of flight.

What could be more nearly human?

Nor is this all the delicate apparatus with the steel shape that carries death and destruction in its blunted nose. There are more than 1,000 pieces of steel, brass and bronze making up the machinery which carries the explosive to its final destination. Everything is automatic, self-contained. Once it leaves its mother-ship the torpedo adjusts itself to varying conditions, as if it had in mind the one thing—hit the other fellow!

Firing a torpedo is simple. That eye of the submarine the periscope, reveals the location of the enemy. The torpedo, already in its tube, awaits the touch of a finger—nothing more. The tube has a spoon-shaped mouth, well greased within, so that the torpedo may shoot out easily and take the water in a horizontal position.

Meanwhile before it has been shoved home, the torpedo's air chamber has been charged to provide the energy of more compressed air, a sort of air-cartridge is placed in position and all is ready for the word.

"Fire!" from the man who knows the moment when the enemy's ship is in direct line with the tube.

The turn of a lever; the torpedo shoots out. It hits the water. Presto! Its mechanism begins to work. The propeller in front frees the firing pin. The gyroscope takes up the proper course. The rudders adjust themselves true to the mark. The instrument sinks to a depth of five or six feet and stays there, flying fast. Only a silver wake, bubbling to the surface, marks its course, sleek as a greyhound's and twice as swift. No human power can stop it until it finds its mark or misses altogether, to die away far off on the surface of the ocean. Then an automatic arrangement causes the torpedo to sink to the bottom so that it can't fall into the enemy's hands. It is charged up with air again and fired back.

Uncle Sam's one place for the manufacture of these torpedoes is at Newport, R. I., where the torpedo station is located. Here officers and men are taught how to handle the big fellows, just as a soldier is taught how to use

BANDNET SOON . . . RUNS THE RAR

Makes It Lifeline, Dull, Dry, Bristle and Thin.

Girls—if you want plenty of thick, beautiful, glossy, silky hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff. For it will mean your hair and ruin it if you don't. It doesn't do much good to try to brush or wash it out. The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid soap; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp, and rub it in gently with the finger tips. By morning, most if not all of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it.

You will find, too, that all itching and itching of the scalp will stop, and your hair will be silky, lustrous, soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid soap at any drug store. It is inexpensive and four ounces is all you will need, no matter how much dandruff you have. This soap makes your hair his gun and hit the gun's base on the rifle range.

To fire a torpedo so that it will count for each shot requires a cool head and a sober one. Plenty of water and a keen eye are also essential for the service. Given these, the job is good and promotion rapid.

CROPS TO FOLLOW CATS

Compass, Guy Beans and Other Legumes Preferred.

By J. F. Dugger, Director, Alabama Experiment Station.

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

As a rule, soil improvement crops are most advisable. Among these first place is usually given to cowpeas. Late or vernal cow beans may also be drilled in previously after oats and corn, and followed by corn or soybeans.

Spanish peanuts may still be planted. But with both soy beans and peanuts there is greater danger of getting a stand after oats than on less open land.

Only if the land is very rich should corn follow oats, and then usually with peas in every other row, or in the middles.

There is still time for sweet potatoes, but on out stubble the stand is often poor.

Sorghum may be planted, then corn or sweet potatoes, but it impoverishes the soil.

BEST VARIETIES OF COWPEAS

Some of the Best Varieties for Seed and Hay and for Disease Resistance.

By E. F. Cauthen, Associate Agriculturalist, Alabama Experiment Station.

Prepared by Extension Service, Auburn, Ala.

Speckled Peas. The most widely known variety of cowpeas is probably speckled peas, called by some Whip-poorwill or "Rhiny." It has some three and a half bushels a good crop of seed. The pods do not burst open as they are ripe and drop the peas on the ground. Harvesting may be delayed some time after the pods ripen.

If this variety is planted for hay it should be sown at the rate of one and a quarter bushels to two bushels per acre. The crowding of the plants forces the vines to grow more nearly upright, makes the mowing easier and increases the yield of hay.

Iron. The iron variety makes a good field of hay and a fair yield of seed. It grows to the plants are intermediate between the bush and the running variety. Its seed are rather small and when not weathered, light yellow in color. Its pods do not burst open as soon as they are ripe; therefore, a delay of several weeks in their harvest does not cause a material loss in the quantity of seed. Land infected with either cowpea or cotton will should be planted with iron or Bratham cowpeas. The iron variety is very subject to mildew on the leaves, but resistant to wilt and root-knot.

Bratham. The Bratham is a new variety, resistant to wilt and root-knot. It somewhat resembles the iron in growth and the speckled in appearance of its smaller seeds. For seed production it stands high, and for hay medium.

New Era. The New Era is a very early bunch variety. The peas are small, nearly round, and of a mottled, dark appearance. Two crops of New Era peas may be grown in one season in the central part of the cotton belt. It is one of the most productive of seed of the very early varieties.

Orlet. This is a new, productive variety, very much like the New Era.

California Black-Eye. This variety is early and produces white, rather large peas, with black eyes, that sell at the highest price. It is extensively grown for table use, and, like most table varieties, it is less productive of seed or vernal than the speckled, New Era or Bratham.

NEAR DEATH BY SMOTHERING

But Husband, With Aid of Cardui, Effects Her Deliverance.

Draper, N. C.—Mrs. Helen Carter, of this place, says: "I suffered for years, with pain in my left side, and would often almost smother to death. My physician prescribed me up for awhile but then I would get worse again. Finally, my husband decided he wanted me to try Cardui, the women's tonic, so he bought me a bottle and I began using it. It did me more good than all the medicines I had taken."

I have induced many of my friends to try Cardui, and they all say they have been benefited by its use. There have been, too, many cases of women who, by using Cardui, have been able to complete with Cardui. Believe it is a real medicine for all womanly troubles.

For over 50 years, Cardui has been relieving women's sufferings and building weak women up to health and strength.

If you are a woman, give it a fair trial. It should surely help you, as it has a million others.

THOUGHTS FOR THE DAY.

Track me, O Lord, the beauty of solitude. Show me that the lonely day was given me in order that I may think quietly and feel deeply, in order that I may live with myself. Grant that I may not continually try to escape myself, but may study to be friendly with myself.

Direct me, that I may intelligently develop all the resources within myself; that I may practice the art of meditation; that I may exercise my imagination, so that it will lift me up to the beautiful meaning of the day; that I may learn the value of books--those comforters of the lonely--to read and mark and have them; that I may have some hobby which will call me each day to the hour of solitude and make it a beautiful every-day.

Help me to learn the courage and patience and self-sufficiency that will temper my loneliness! Too much are our lives surrounded by hurrying feet and the fevered voices of the self-seeking. Grant that I may find my happiness not in what I have, but in what I am; not in possessing much, but in hoping and loving much.

May these hours of solitude give me strength to make real my ideals of womanly sweetness. Amen!--By Edith Markham Walcott.

way, however--the way, best for himself and everybody else concerned--a boy's will must be trained to unselfishness, to consideration, to kindness, to aiming at the noblest things of life, and to rest satisfied with nothing less.

Miss Ethel Nix of Los Angeles, California, arrived in Montgomery yesterday to be operated on at one of the Montgomery infirmaries for appendicitis. Her mother, Mrs. Carrie Nix, left for Montgomery this morning to be with her during her illness. It was expected that the operation would be performed today.

Mr. Fred Hardwick of Headland was here yesterday.

THE JITNEYS ARE COMING.

In the May American Magazine Hugh S. Fullerton writes an exceedingly interesting little article entitled, "The Jitneys Are Coming." Following is a brief extract:

"Today Jitney busses are running in almost every large city in the West and Central West, and lines are being started everywhere. The latest reports indicate that there are between eight thousand and nine thousand licensed Jitneys operating in these cities. There are two hundred in Los Angeles alone, nearly five hundred in San Francisco, New Orleans in the hands of the Jits--Denver, Washington, and now Chicago and Washington. The conquering hosts of Jitney busses have swept eastward, overwhelming the entire country and, incidentally, bringing with them new municipal problems that may prove as hard to solve as were the old ones.

"The two big problems are congestion of streets and danger of injury. In Kansas City the traffic police and others declare that the Jitneys do not congest traffic as much as street cars do, and are easier to handle. Los Angeles already is complaining of congestion of the main downtown streets and danger to pedestrians and shoppers.

"It is evident that before the Jitneys are received as an established public service factor some liability insurance must be arranged. The Jitneys are operated chiefly by persons of small means, and the danger of personal injury of passengers is to be considered. The street car companies declare the proportion of passengers injured will be larger than in any other form of transportation, and that it will be practically impossible for injured passengers to recover damages."

BETTER BABIES

The crusade for better babies has spread from meadow to meadow and taken firm hold of American Mothers. Few women realize how much the ill health of the mother influences the unborn child, both physically and mentally. Women who suffer from mysterious pains, backache, nervousness, mental depression, headaches, etc., should rely on Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, which for nearly forty years has been the standard remedy for these ailments.
